No person, whether a British subject or not, can obtain entrance unless holding a pass from the Brigade Office stating that there are reasons for his or her admission, and no one whatever is to be allowed inside, if the visit is out of more curiosity. No foreigner, of whatever nationality, can be admitted unless he has a special permit issued by the War Office at London. Even officers of the Army, stationed in Halifax, are not permitted to pass the gates, if they happen to be dressed in plain clothing and without the necessary pass.

A communication received from the home authorities this week contains orders that these new rules are to be enforced with the greatest strictness. The reason for the measures taken to so rigorously exclude the public is said to be because newspaper correspondents have been granted so much freedom inside the model in the past that they have been enabled to give minute descriptions of the works, guns, etc., and this the authorities do not appreciate.
